The best and safest way to increase one's savings is to place it where there can be no possibility of losing it, and where it will bear interest. The man who loans twenty dollars and gets a hundred-dollar gold watch is confident that his money will come back when the time of the loan expires. There are hundreds who leave their money idle for want of such confidence, and will say I would gladly place my money if I only could get such security as the man who got his money when the borrower gave him his gold watch. Where could I get such security? The Salt Lake Security & Trust company has better than any gold watch, or diamond ring. It has improved real estate insured sometimes to the full amount of the loan. Money then should not be idle when it can be doubly secured and the borrower can lock up in his premises his first-class gilt-edge first mortgage security. Write for a list of our securities.

OBITUARY.

Gillis.

Neil Gillis, one of the very early-day miners of Park City, and at one time shift boss in No. 2 workings, died in Pasadena, Cal., on Wednesday, Nov. 21. For the past several years he had suffered a great deal with asthma and a complication of other complaints, and to these are attributed his death. He was about 64 years of age, and leaves a brother at Park City to mourn his loss.

Neil Gillis came from Nova Scotia and went to work at the Ontario mine within a year or two after its discovery. In 1874-5 he sank the No. 2 shaft to the 600-foot level under contract. Later he became shift boss in the property, and filled that position for several years and until, finally, he fell down through a chute and badly crippled one of his feet that he was in the hospital for several months. After recovery from the accident he determined never to go into mining again, and he kept his word. Mr. Gillis bought stock in the Ontario and Daly mines early in the game, and his investment made him a snug fortune.

Michael D. Murphy, who resided at 31 East Fifth South street, this city, died at Goldfield, Sunday, of pneumonia. He was 60 years old. His wife, a son and daughter survive him. Mrs. Murphy was with him when he died.

Mr. Murphy has been prominent in Nevada mining circles for several years. He was formerly superintendent of the Bullion-Buck Mining company.

The funeral occurred on Wednesday morning. Requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Kelly, who preached the funeral sermon.

Be you then also ready, for at what hour you think not, the son of man will come.

The solemn requiem services of the Catholic church seldom fail to awaken in the hearts of the friends and mourners present melancholy feelings. We are transported in spirit to the invisible world where many dear friends have gone before us, and reminded of the great and mysterious unknown of which will some day become our everlasting abode.

In steering onward, faith alone strengthens the tottering steps of the aged, who hope for blissful immortality. It enables them to look with calmness on the sad parting, which is but for a brief period.

The apparent victory gained by death is to the true soldier of Christ, simply a temporary dissolution of the soul and body which will be reunited when time as we now reckon it, will have an end. This faith strips death of its sting, and robs the grave of its apparent victory.

Those who live under the sunshine of this happy hope, the child of faith, whilst they may weep, are nevertheless in their very sadness happy. Faith is always triumphant. No faith, no hope. No hope, no heaven. No heaven, no life. Death casts its shadow on the scene of life. The deceased was a man of strong faith, and as we all know him in this city, he was a good, honest man who attended to his own business, never intruding upon others. He was always religious duties and raised his family in truly Christian manner. His home was an ideal Catholic home, and those who visited there were always edified and felt the benign influence of the entire family.

He left this city some months ago, and went to a distant mining camp, where he should have gone to rest and provide for old age. His hopes were realized, and at the very time the summons came he was prosperous. He was not taken unaware. If he needed the mercy of God he had time to implore it. He had the priest by the side of his deathbed to utter the consoling words of absolution, to nourish him with the Bread of Life, and strengthen him with the sacrament of extreme unction in bidding his last farewell to the partner of his married life. His children, whom he loved and who loved him, were not there to receive his last farewells. His death was as sudden as a lightning bolt, and he was always edified and felt the benign influence of the entire family.
